

UNSTOPPABLE

Nandita Samanta

Disappointment, loneliness, insignificance
Can push someone to the edge of oblivion
Jagged shards of memory cut, bite, scrap the already dented psyche
Even in recollection the heart squall for mercy.

Immobilized one stands rambling between if's and maybe's
Locked in an unknown maze
the shrouded living corpse echoes every inhaling-exhaling breath.
Pain inscribe glyphs on the walls of the heart
Ecstasy's imminent storm moan and groan muffled in the wall.

The soul stands on the pulpit
Pretending to believe in -
I do , how well I do.
Awareness Like dark mocha in a cup of expectation
Float as froth on miraculous possibilities
Hoping to conjoin the now diverged path
And begin a new journey towards infinity.

As if awakening from a deep slumber
Happily entangled in situations and destiny
Glide past all devious despair
Triumphing over the chaos
Life starts all over again it's torturous journey in the labyrinthine path.

Bio Note

I'm a science graduate and had been in teaching profession. Write poetries in English Bengali & Hindi. My poetries have been published in many magazines, web journals and anthologies. Born in West Bengal and brought up in different states of India I write poetry on vivid themes based on my personal observation on love ,life ,nature and mythology . I Write Haiku/Tanka /Senryu/Otava Rima and other categories too. Poetry is my passion .