Glimpses of Her as she leaves to conquer,
lonely dinners
with Ayas in a corner.
A surrogate mother
to a stranger.

You so enamoured
with your reflection,
fail to notice the solemn face at the corner of the mirror,
watching with dejection.

Does your world of Power, ego and narcissism
have a moment
to think of another life?
A small life with little dreams, little delights and idealism.

Times spent in strangers' house,
hours of bewilderment,
I face you and ask, "Who are You?"
With a surprised voice you say,
"I am your mother."
