O, melancholy break your shell and come out
In the fresh open suffoundings
Why do you suffocate inside feeling sad?
Soar high up
Look how God's mercy flows
The moonless night yields to golden sun
The dawn gives birth to infinite sunrays
Flower withers but fruit gets sweeter
Seed disappears a tree sways in glory
Oil burns but flame illuminates
Doesn't death truly end in everlasting life?
Look at flower smiling amongst thorns
Night rays shining through dark clouds
Spring smile in starkest winter
Open your eyes, the pain will go away
Why are you in vein afraid of death?
It is the door that opens God's mercy
The mother awaits with open arms to Embrace and hold you close to her chest
Very effortless to die toward and end the life
But the chore is too intricate to survive and die each day.
